

LifeRing's Menu Editor Allows Users to Customize UI to Fit Their Needs

AGIS recognizes that all users are not alike. Different scenarios, missions, locations and connectivity may dictate what features and functions you need to have ready access to while operating LifeRing in the field. Our latest version allows each user to toggle on/off the menu items they want displayed on their system. Simply check on the  which causes a select functions available form to appear. Select or deselect those functions that you want to or do not want to appear on the LifeRing operator active function Task bar.

There are many other configuration options at the user and server administrator level to customize the display. Extensive training material, embedded tutorial videos and the ability to customize the interface for each user, makes LifeRing the most powerful, flexible and easy to use Command and Control system on the market.
